PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 8. The 37th annual session of the New England Christian Convention, which opened in Kittery the 7th inst., adjourned this evening. About fifty churches were represented. Rev. John A. Goss presided. The programme included reports of educational, missionary and Sunday School societies; educational address by Rev. Martin Summerhill; missionary address by Rev. O. A. Roberts; sermons each evening by prominent pastors, and miscellaneous business transacted. The affairs of the denomination were reported flourishing. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President—Rev. C. A. Beck.
Secretary, Rev. I. S. Jones.
Treasurer, Rev. I. H. Cole.

Bishop Healy in Portsmouth.

The rite of confirmation was administered to 150 candidates at the Church of the Immaculate Conception this evening. Rt. Rev. Bishop Healy of this diocese officiated, assisted by Father Callahan of the parish and six visiting clergymen.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The State Temperance Convention.

NASHUA, June 8.—The Temperance State convention met at 10 o'clock with an increased attendance from yesterday. The committees reported and the forenoon session was devoted to business, a committee being appointed to bring a list of officers for the State association, who will report this afternoon. The resolutions adopted condemn the rum traffic strongly; state that the time has now come when it is the duty of officers to enforce the prohibitory as well as other laws; that it is incumbent upon the mayors of cities and selectmen of towns to enforce the law with impartiality; that the lavish and corrupt use of money in elections is an alarming and growing evil, turning the politics of the State into a school of corruption, threatening unless checked to undermine popular elections. The resolutions recommend the election only of upright, temperate and independent men.

WASHINGTON.

The Bonded Whiskey Investigation.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The investigation relative to the passage of the bonded whiskey bill was resumed to-day. Hawthorne Hill of the Louisville Commercial, A. C. Buell of the Washington Critic, and Charles Nordhoff of the New York Herald, were examined. Buell said he did not know that any journalist or Congress had been corruptly influenced in connection with the passage of the bill; he only suspected. He never before knew a bill involving 60 millions between the government and individuals passed under suspension of rules.

The Tariff Commission.

It is stated on authority of Senators from Missouri that John S. Phelps of that State has declined the nomination as a member of the tariff commission.

Twenty-four Democratic Senators met in caucus after the adjournmant of the Senate today to discuss the President's nominees for tariff commissioners. No attempt was made to procure action on the question, and at the conclusion of the conference every Senator was left free to vote upon it in executive session according to his own judgment. It was developed, however, that the Democratic Senators are practically unanimous in holding that the commission is unfairly constituted, and should, therefore, be rejected.

THE STRIKES.

Probable Compromise at Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, June 8.—The Milwaukee representatives of the North Chicago Rolling Mill Comlany held a conference last evening with delegates from the various departments in the mills at Bay View, and an amicable arrangement was arrived at relative to a number of matters involved in the great strike. It is understood that the manufacturers here are willing to meet the laborers half way, and will allow them a partial advance where such is possible. There is every reason to believe that at the conference to be held on Friday matters will be so arranged that several of the departments will start up again next week. The feeling at Bay View yesterday was that of confidence, and all the workmen seemed to be elated that local difficulties at least will be amicably adjusted. Interviews with the manufacturers developed the fact that they had virtually decided to concede a number of important points, although they assert that they have only decided upon such advances as seem to them necessary and just.

The Situation in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG, June 8.—There are no indications yet that the action of the manufacturers' meeting yesterday in resolving to resist granting any advance whateqer over present wages will cause any material charge in the situation.

READING, Pa., June 8.—One hundred men employed in the Tube mill of the Reading Iron Works quit to-day, being dissatisfied with the notice by the management with reference to certain iron.

THE ITALIAN PATRIOT.

Garibaldi's Remains Consigned to Their Last Resting Place.

MADDALENA, June 8.—The remains of Garibaldi were interred in the cemetery at Caprora this afternoon. The funeral services began at 3.45, and closed at 5 o'clock. A storm of wind and rain raged the whole time. The coffin, which was covered with a garland and flowers, was borne by some of the survivors of the thousand of Marsala, and followed by the Duke of Genoa, Signor Zamandelli, Gen. Ferraro, representatives of both chambers and delegates of three hundred various associations. Speeches were delivered at the grave by the Vice President of the Senate, and President of the Chamber of Deputies, the two Cabinet ministers precent, and Signor Crispi. All applauded the deeds of the deceased. As the coffin was lowered into the grave, salutes were fired by the Italian men-of-war Washington and Cariddi.

NEW YORK, June 8.—A Rome dispatch says: "Garibaldi's friends, yielding to representations from all parts of Italy, decided last night not to bury the General's corpse, but to consent to its temporary interment in a triple coffin at Caprera, and to the subsequent transferment of the remains to this city for interment. A suitable monument will be erected on the Janiculum. Garibaldi's widow and children will reside at Turin.

GETTYSBURG.

Reunion of the Veterans and Survey of The Second Day's Fight.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., June 8.—There were strange and interesting scenes in and about this quiet little town yesterday and last night. At least 200 veteran soldiers, from privates up to major-generals, gathered here to assist in locating the different positions of the companies, regiments, brigades, divisions and corps during the three days fight upon these historic fields. With them are representatives of the confederate army who came here to do what they could to mark and preserve every feature of this field in enduring form while the actors in the great tragedy are still living. A few of the soldiers arrived Tuesday night. Gen. Forney of Alabama, who commanded a brigade in Wilcox's division of the confederate forces, and Col. Herbert of the 8th Alabama, and Col. Aiken, who commanded a South Carolina regiment, all of whom are now members of Congress, came over with Col. W. H. Shallenberger, who fought them in the wheat field where the gallant Zook fell. Maj. Martin Maginnes, who charged Forney's whole brigade in the peach orchard with about 200 men of the first Minnesota infantry, came also. Gen. J. R. Brook, colonel of the 61 United States infantry, that was in Hancock's corps during the battle here, also came.

The early morning trains brought large numbers of soldiers from the different States, who spent the day going over the field. Gen. Ellis Spear and Cols. Merrill and Wilson of Maine represented the Pine Tree State. Col. Stoughton of Palmer, Mass., who commanded the 2d United States sharpshooters at the Devil's Den was among the first here. Col. Cummins of Western New York and about 20 officers and men of his regiment came early. Capt. Winslow, whose famous battery did great service here, came from St. Lawrence county, and there were several other representatives of the eastern States. Among the throng the diamond of the old 3d corps was more conspicuous than of all the other corps that took part in this great battle combined. This is partly due to the fact that at this meeting the position of the troops in the second day's fighting is to be located, and that that corps bore the heat and burden of that day in the heavy fighting. Then the old commander of that corps, Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, was to be here, and most of those who are here had not seen him since he was carried off this field, 19 years ago, with a leg shot off. Sickles arrived about 1 o'clock this afternoon, accompanied by Maj.-Gen. Tom W. Egan, known as fighting Tom Egan, who made the famous charge at the Devil's Den, on the second day.

Sickles is naturally the central figure of this gathering, and it must do the old warrior's heart good to see such evidences of affection for him as has been manifested all day. "I haven't seen you for nigh 20 years," said an old veteran from Maine with one wooden leg, "but I love you as well as ever. Wasn't it hot in the peach orchard? I lost my leg, general, in your bout with Longstreet there." This was but one of a hundred like salutations which greeted the general wherever he went. "I reported to you just as you lost your leg," said Winslow, "and you thought I had only one gun left, but I had them all." Gen. Sickles, accompanied by Maj.-Gen. Egan, Maj-Gen. Crawford, and Col. Randolph, his chief of artillery, who came all the way from Colorado, to help locate the scenes of the fighting, traversed the whole field of Sickles' great battle on the second day.

It was thought that there would be some trouble in agreeing upon the position of the troops, but not so. There is perfect accord as to the position of the different commands, and it is astonishing how readily and with what accuracy the men and officers pick out the places their regiments occupied in the heat of battle after 19 years absence from the field. Col. Randolph, who was with Gen. Sickles when he lost his leg, agreed with his chief as to the spot where he was wounded, and to-day it will be appropriately marked, as will the other positions of Gen. Sickles' command on that day.

To-day all the officers and soldiers here will go over it again, and the position of the troops as designated, officially marked. Last night the Gettysburg Memorial Association gave a reception in the town hall to the veterans, and it was a most pleasant reunion. The hall was crowded with old soldiers, and, as each officer of distinction came in, he was enthusiastically received. As Gen. Sickles came down the aisle the crowd arose and greeted him with a perfect ovation. Col. Batchelder of Massachusetts, the government historian of the battlefield, conducted the exercises. Col. Shallenberger of the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress spoke first and then there was a call for Sickles, but he could not be induced to speak. Gen. Beaver spoke briefly, and was received with marked distinction. All the confederate officers made brief, patriotic speeches, that were loudly cheered. Indeed, it seemed to be the disposition of all present to give them a very hearty welcome. Gen. Brooke, Gen. Spear and Maj. Maginnes made a few remarks, and it was after 10 o'clock when the gathering broke up. Gen. Sickles and Gen. Beaver were taken by the crowd, and held quite a reception in the hall, nearly all of the old soldiers pressing forward, asking to shake hands with them. Almost every other man was minus an arm or a leg. There will be another reunion of the officers and men of the two armies on the 14th of June to designate other features of the battlefield, and others will follow later in the summer and fall. The position of each command is to be designated by a monument.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

Michael Davitt's Communistic Theories of Land Ownership.

LONDON, June 8.—Michael Davitt sails for America in the steamer Germanic. The object of his visit is to explain the scope and meaning of the new development of the land agitation, which has for its aim the nationalization of land. Mr. Davitt has embraced theories advanced by Henry George and other communistic writers, that ownership of land in any county should be completely vested in the State and not in private owners, whether peasant, proprietors or landlords. This is a novel departure in Irish social politics and one not likely to be received with favor by the 600,000 farmers who have been taught by the agitation of the past few years to look forward to the time when they should be the owners of their farms. Davitt hopes to convert Irish-Americans to his way of thinking.

Mr. Parnell will have nothing to do with the new theory. He intends to continue the struggle for the abolition of landlordism on the old Land League lines of the establishment of a peasant proprietorship. In this he expects to be supported by the narliamentary party and an overwhelming majority of the people of Ireland. Apprehensions, however, are entertained that the more violent section of Irish-Americans may induce or force Davitt to push his theories so far as to lead to a split in the Land League ranks in the United States. Davitt's known devotion to the Land League cause, however, is relied upon to avoid the creation of a division which could not fail to prove fatal to the interests of the Irish farmers.

BOLD RASCALITY.

A Missouri Bank Robbed by Six Masked Men, who Make Good their Escape.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 8—About 3.50 yesterday afternoon, just as the Bank of Brookfield, situated in the town of Brookfield, on the Hannibal and St. Joe Railroad, was closing for the day, six men rode into town, and dismounting entered the bank, where they covered the clerks with their revolvers, and went through the safe and money drawers, securing about $5000 in cash. They then backed out, still covering the frightened bank people with their revolvers. Remounting, they departed, firing their revolvers and shouting like demons. The men were all masked. The bank people thought Frank James was the leader of the gang. The County Sheriff and Marshal organized a posse as quickly as possible, and started after the robbers. Both the Fords, Dick Little, ex-Marshall Leggett and others in this city, who are familiar with the James gang, think that Frank James was not connected with this affair, although they admit that the job was done up in the James' boys style. It is claimed that Frank is not in the neighborhood, however. There is plenty of tall timber near Brookfield, and it is not thought likely that the gang will be captured. A dispatch from St. Joseph says a telegram from Kirksville, not far from Brookfield, states that a party of men have been stopping on the Harper Farm, five miles south-west of that place, the past three weeks, and kept their revolvers on all the time. Nobody knew them. Several horses were stolen there on Saturday night.

Death of a Prominent Vermonter.

NEWPORT, Vt., June 8.—Hon. Lucius Robinson died this morning from gangrene in the foot. His leg was amputated Tuesday, but the result was unsuccessful. Deceased was 59 years old, and at the time of his death was president of the National Bank of Newport, director in the Derby Line National Bank and Passumpsic railroad, and largely interested in railroads and other enterprises outside the State, and leaves a large property. He has been a member of the State Legislature and has held important town offices; was a member of the Charleston convention of 1860, and chairman of the State delegation at the last national convention. He leaves a wife and brother, the latter, Hon. Geo. S. Robinson, being a prominent lawyer of Illinois.

Newfoundland Matters.

QUEBEC, June 8.—Advices from Cape Ray, N. F., state that cattle and sheep are dying from hunger, the seal and cod fisheries have been failures, and much destitution prevails among the fishermen.

ST. JOHNS, N.F., June 8.—Schooner Medicine arrived off Cape Spear this morning, and landed two fishermen, picked up by the Norwegian barque bound to Philadelphia. The men belonged to the banker J. W. Roberts, and got lost in the bay while overhauling trawls. They were four days and nights in a dory, without food or water, and suffered terribly, and were almost exhausted when rescued.

The Mexican Congress has repealed the export duty on silver.

XLVIIth Congress-1st Session.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 8.

Mr. Blair's resolution, calling for information as to the quantity of lands embraced in the land grants to certain railroads, etc., was adopted, and the list of the roads mentioned further enlarged, upon suggestion of Mr. Blair.

The committee amendment remitting about $40,000 of unpaid taxes on the property of the late Superintendent Patterson of the coast survey, was rejected. Upon the bill being reported from the committee of the whole the discussion upon amendments on which a separate vote was requested, was renewed. The committee was sustained in each instance, and no further change made. The bill was then passed.

Mr. Hawley reported from the military committee a joint resolution appropriating $10,000 or so much thereof as may be needed to furnish food to the people made destitute by the Mississippi floods in Mississippi. The resolution passed.

Adjourned.

HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Curtis of Pennsylvania, a bill was passed increasing to $40 per month the pension of any person who in the late war lost an arm, leg or foot, or received disabilities equal thereto.

The House then went into committee of the whole, Updegraff of Iowa in the chair, and resumed the general deficiency appropriation bill.

At 3.10 consideration of the bill was completed and the committee rose and reported it back to the House. The first vote was taken on Mr. Hohman's motion to strike out the clause appropriating $125,000 for payment of army transportation to such land grant railroads as had not received and in government bonds. Lost.

A motion to strike out the clause appropriating $362,000 to the bureaus of construction and repairs and steam engineering was also lost, yeas 67, nays 97.

A motion to strike out the clause appropriating $112,600 for payment of special deputy marshals at the congressional election of 1881 and prior years was lost. The bill then passed, yeas 116, nays 57. The House then went into committee of the whole on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. Cannon, chairman of the sub-committee on appropriations, explained the provisions of the bill minutely, and without action the committee rose.

On motion of Mr. Cox a resolution was passed authorizing the Secretary of War to loan to the Hebrew Emigrant Aid Society of the United States, 1000 tents for use of Russian Jewish refugees now without shelter at Vineland, N. J.

Mr. Brewer introduced a bill for the protection of fisheries on the Atlantic coast. Referred.

Mr. Calkins submitted a report in the matter of expense accounts of parties to the contested election cases. Referred to the committee on appropriations.

Adjourned.

THE EGYPTIAN REVOLT.

Intrigues Against the Sultan.

VARNA, June 8.—It is stated that Arabi Pasha is acting in conjunction with the Sheik Oum Um Refik, brother of the late Grand Sheriff of Mecca, Hussein, whose assassination is believed to have been instigated by the Sultan. They are secretly fanning disloyalty among the tribes of the Hedjaz in North Arabia and Syria and are encouraging them to throw off the Turkish yoke and proclaim an Arabian caliphate.

The Sultan Opposed to the Conference.

The Sultan has informed the Spanish Minister and other foreign representatives that he is prepared to go almost any length to prevent the meeting of the proposed Constantinople Conference, which he regards as a direct infringement of his rights, not only as Sultan, but as Caliph. The Sultan ordered redoubled precaution to be taken to assure the personal safety of Dervisch Pasha. Nobody is permitted to hold written or verbal communication with the Circassian Egyptian officials, who have been brought to Constantinople and are lodged in the Beglerbeg barracks.

Affairs in Egypt.

CAIRO, June 8.—Yacoub Pacha, emissary of the military party, despite the commands of the Khedive, travelled on the special train which conveyed the Turkish mission to Cairo. He afterward proceeded to Ghezireh palace seated in Dervisch Pacha's carriage with a sheikh and achmet. Essad, assistant commissioner of the military party, arranged a sort of demonstration. Several hundred youth of the lower class run before and behind the cordege shouting "Allah make Islam victorious; Allah destry the heathen." They also grossly insulted the European spectators assembled on Hotel des Etrangers.

The Khedive gave audience to the principal members of the mission who presented themselves at 5 in the evening. The interview lasted three-quarters of an hour. The Khedive afterward returned the visit. The diplomatic agents of England and France will visis Deervirch Pasha Friday afternoon.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Five Children Run Over and Killed by Their Uncle's Train.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Mail says yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, on the Harlem railroad near Cos Cob, five children belonging to John Lockwood of that village, three girls and two boys, the eldest 14 and youngest 4, were walking on the track when they heard a train behind them. They crossed to the adjoining track when the New Haven express dashed up. Utterly bewildered and unable to get out either way, the children stood still for a moment. The engineer saw them and endeavored to stop his train but it was too late and the train dashed over them, killing them instantly, two being literally ground up. What makes the case particularly distressing is that an uncle of the children, Frederick Lockwood, was engineer of the train. No blame attaches to him.

[LATER.]

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 8.—Conductor Lockwood who runs the Westward bound train which passes through Cos Cob about 5 o'clock in the afternoon denies the story of the killing of five children, and Superintendent Reed of the consolidated roads knows nothing about it. Conductor Lockwood lives in Cos Cob and his brother is named John Lockwood.

Twelfth Annual Conference of the Secretaries' Association.

NEW HAVEN, June 8.—The twelfth annual conference of the Secretaries' Association of the Young Men's Christian Associations of America assembled in Association Hall last evening. Mr. Oates, Secretary of the Glasgow (Scotland) association, made a brief address. This morning the regular business of the convention was taken up. The report of the international committee shows that since the committee was organized sixteen years ago the number of secretaries has increased from 7 to 237, the association buildings from none to 66, costing $2,700,000. Among railroad men 46 secretaries are employed, and railroad corporations contribute to support this moral work among their employes $50,000 per annum. There are 175 college associations. Four German secretaries are employed, and a needful work is being done among the colored young men of the South.

GARFIELD'S MURDERER.

An Appeal to the President for a Medical Commission.

CHICAGO, June 8.—Mrs. Scoville has given to the press for publication a copy of a petition addressed to President Arthur, asking for a stay of execution in the case of Guiteau until a commission of competent physicians, acknowledged by the fraternity to be above adverse criticism, shall be appointed and shall examine into the question of his insanity.

The following note is addressed to the public: "As there is not sufficient time to make a canvass for signatures to the foregoing petition to the many who fully indorse it, I ask every one who is in favor of the petition to send their names through the mail to me. Address Mrs. Frances M. Scoville, Room 63, No 89 Randolph street, Chicago, Ill."

MEXICO.

An American Missionary Assaulted by a Mob.

MATAMORAS, Mexico, June 8.—News has reached here of a riot, with loss of life, in Littletown, near Guadalajarah Jalisco, this morning. Rev. Mr. Walkins, an American missionary, went to Littletown to preach, and asked the protection of the political chief. He was refused, and the chief led the mob in an attack on the building in which Mr. Watkins's party held services. The latter fled to the roof and fired down on their assailants, killing four or five and wounding several others. The mob then set fire to the building, and the Watkins party were smoked out, and only escaped being murdered by Watkins guaranteeing to pay $1,000. Gen. Talentina, with a detachment of troops, marched on the town and arrested all the participants.

THE OREGON ELECTION.

A Republican Majority in the Legislature —Decrease in the Democratic Vote

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—A Portland (Ore.) dispatch says: The Legislature is evidently Republican by two majority. Returns from remote counties may increase it to six or seven The wires to Eastern Oregon are still down. Mail advices indicate that the Democratic majorities in that section will be smaller than usual, and previous figures on the majority for the State Republican ticket are probably too low.

THE STAR R TES.

McSweeney Concludes His Argument in Dorsey's Defense.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Judge Wylie at the opening of the court to-day referred to newspaper articles reflecting upon the jury, which he was convinced contained unjust charges. He thought it the duty of the district attorney to take official notice of these newspaper articles which tended to embarass the administration of justice. He cautioned the jury to avoid even the appearance of collusion with persons outside, to keep their own counsel and keep themselves uncontaminated by the outside world.

McSweeney then resumed his argument and proceeded to defend ex-Senator Dorsey from the charges made against him by Mr. Bliss in the opening argument. He concluded his address with an eloquent peroration, and charged the jury to obey the injunctions of the court and be true to themselves, remembering Curran's couplet, "That only is punishment which lights on guilt, that is vengeance which breaks on innocence." This address closed the opening argument.

After recess several attaches of the post office department were sworn and produced records showing the figures bearing upon the mail service from 1877 to 1881. Amos Wilson, journal clerk testified to the business methods of the second assistant postmaster general's office. Witness stated the postmaster general was responsible for all orders and if they had been certified to by the auditor before signature it was by his authority. The information brought out by this question was evidently highly satisfactory to the defense. Geo. W. Sweeney, clerk in the contract division of the post office department, gave a description of the system of advertising for bids for the Star route service. Adjourned till to-morrow.

The Austrians were surprised and compelled to retreat, with a loss of 95 killed. The insurgents lost 26 killed and wounded. On the 3d inst. the insurgents attacked and destroyed the Austrian barracks at Bischina, killing 25 of the troops; the rest fled.

Wallace, earnestly urging him to exert his good offices with the Sultan to enable them to colonize Syria in groups of 500 or 1000. The Jewish refugees here are starving and more are still coming. Gen. Wallace has asked for instructions from Washington.

The Repression Bill in the Commons.

LONDON, June 8.—Debate on the repression bill was resumed in the Commons this evening. Chas. Russell's amendment defining intimidation as threats or acts of violence to person or property or an incitement thereto was rejected 45 to 256.

An amendment offered by Parnell seeking to define intimidation and limiting it to certain definite acts was also rejected 247 to 36.

An Ohio saloon keeper says that during a strike the demand for drinks is always greatest. Is this the reason that some of them encourage strikes?

The estimate at Washington is that the debt reduction for the current fiscal year will reach fully $150,000,000; at which rate, if the present status is not disturbed, we shall clear the deck in 10 years.

The story that the President and Mr. Conkling went to Long Island on a fishing excursion Sunday was, like most fish stories, a lie. It originated in the blackguard New York Sun.

Somerset Reporter: As soon as our Mr. Reed assumed the leadership, the Republicans in Congress, who of late have appeared like a flock of sheep without a shepherd, began to rally and show signs of discipline.

Aroostook Republican: Plaisted "claimed" to be a Republican until 1879. He then "jumped a claim" which had been opened and worked by the Greenbackers, and sold it out to the Democrats. The honest Greenbackers now pronounce him a "heathen Chinee" and say he must go.

Mrs. Samuels, the mother-in-law of the late Jesse James, declares that if Frank James is pardoned, he has experienced such a change of heart that he will become an ornament to society. The bullet that brought Jesse James to his death was the only thing that could have beneficently touched the tender heart of this brother cut-throat.

It has been decided by the powers that be that Alaska is not entitled to be represented in Congress by a territorial delegate. That is a comfort, as if it had been otherwise adjudged, the man chosen to act in that capacity would have had a claim for mileage which would have gone a good way toward reducing the surplus funds in the United States Treasury.

The best news that has come from Ireland for a long time is the news that the crops promise to be excellent. It was a failure of the harvest which began all the present trouble, and if the tenant farmers could once manage to get a little ahead, the settlement of the political unpleasantness would be greatly facilitated. There is a chance of this now if the weather continues favorable and the Arrears of Rent bill get through Parliament this session.

"The idea, however," says Charles Francis Adams, Jr., in an address on New England in the last century, "that these earlier times were more Arcadian and virtuous than the present, because they were poorer and more primitive, is wholly fallacious. They were a coarse as well as a poor people, and they had their besetting sins. Chief among these was intemperance. Rum was the bane of New England, and the bane of those who went out from New England."

It seems to be understood that the balance of trade has turned against us, but thus far all the official reports from the Bureau of Statistics at Washington show that down to the close of the month of April the foreign commerce of the Republic for the past twelve months exhibited an excess of exports of merchandise of at least $60,000,000 over the total volume of imports of foreign goods. The misunderstanding seems to occur in consequence of basing opinions on this subject on the figures for the port of New York alone.

If it be true, as has been reported, that the Italian government has been purchasing the gold lately exported to England from the United States, it may be regarded as evident that Italy is preparing for the resumption of specie payments on a gold basis, in much the same way that resumption was accomplished by the United States. So far as this purpose is concerned, it is so excellent a one for the commerce and international exchanges of the world that we can easily spare the gold required for the success of the undertaking.

Rebellion and revolt come, like summer rains, in showers. While the burden of Irish agitation is on the government's shoulders, and the pan-Islam movement endangers Egypt, a sinister event casts a lurid light on Britain's Indian horizon. A massacre, not so extensive, but quite as brutal as that which horrified the world at Cawnpore in 1854, is reported from an obscure interior town in the Indian Empire of the Queen. The rage of the revolters seems for the moment to have sated itself in massacring fellow natives, but there is no telling from the causes assigned how soon the long-repressed hatred of the millions may turn against the minority of Europeans.

An ingeniously superstitious person has found out why it is that the country has not been doing so well for the past twelve months, why the crops have failed, and business been depressed, why the balance of trade has been turned against us, and winter lingers so unconscionably in the lap of spring. He attributes this sequence of misfortunes and reverses to the fact that the country has a monumental Jonah within its borders in the person of Charles J. Guiteau, and he insists upon it that so long as Mr. Garfield's assassin remains in the land of the living, and the murder of last July is unavenged, we need not expect that fortune will smile upon us. There is something original in that theory at any rate, and time was when it might have found general acceptance, but the evil complained of will soon be removed. Guiteau's time is growing short.

A correspondent of the Augusta Chronicle sharply criticises Senator Bayard for going out of his way, in his Mechlenburg oration at Charlotte, to "disparage the Yankees of the revolution. He writes: "Mr. Bayard's anti-New England sarcasm fell stillborn upon his audience. The people came to Charlotte to revive, not to destroy, their ante-bellum patriotism. It was as the Frenchman said, 'a blunder, which is worse than a crime.' In another sense, did the distinguished senator misunderstand the situation. Many thoughtful men believe that the true interests of the new South point to an alliance with New England, rather than with the West. To engender bad feeling between them was, then, surely a mistake. But when it is remembered that Mr. Bayard is a standing candidate for President, it was in very bad taste for him to reflect, however guardedly, upon the history of a State from which he could not hope for any support. It was cleverly done, and well calculated to please an auditory south of Mason and Dixon's line 20 years ago. But the time has passed for cursing the damned Yankee."

New York Fashions.

Mull muslin, French nainsook, and other sheer lawns that have no starch and are of dull ivory white, yet are clearer than cream color, are the fabrics used in imported dresses. Embroidery is invariably employed for the trimming, and to this is sometimes added some inexpensive lace, or perhaps a little real Mechlin, or Valenciennes in the new designs that have small figures with feathery edges, and show a great deal of the foundation meshwork. The embroidery is most effectively used as scant flounces for the skirt, trimming it sometimes in many rows up the front, with three rows extending all around it, and ample back drapery to cover the plain part of the back; while other dresses have three or four embroidered flounces, so wide that they cover all the skirt but a short space for hip drapery. The open designs for such work have been most in favor, but there are also many flounces of the thicker work that can scarcely be detected from needle-work. For simple dresses this work is done in patterns of dots scattered about, or else in scalloped rows near the edge, and is very effective. For more elaborate dresses there are larger flower, leaf and vine patterns, and some blocks, Greek squares, and involved geometrical designs. The over-dress of white muslin is made without lining, but is worn over a high corset cover, the sleeves being the only transparent part of the corsage. The neck is cut in a low point in front or it may be finished high at the throat with a standing ruffle of embroidery, and inside this two standing frills of lace. A pretty finish for a pointed throat is given also by a fichu of the mull that is shirred down its only seam—that in the middle behind; its bias ends drawn closely down on the shoulders are lapped, or knotted, or held by a ribbon bow on the bust just above the waist line in front. This fichu may also be added to a high corsage to give the effect of a full bust and sloping shoulders; the high corsage has its standing frills of embroidery and lace, and the embroidery may also be in lengthwise rows to form a vest, and extend thence along the edge of the panlers that curve down on each hip from the middle of the front. Another trimming that is quite inexpensive is a puff of the sheer mull around the neck and wrists with ribbon run in it. There may be frills of embroidery or lace below the puff, but for a simple dress a pretty frill may be added of the mull doubled and bias, and this should be pulled apart in pouf-like roundness, instead of being pressed flat. Very narrow ribbon, only half an inch wide, may be knotted or looped with many ends in the front or on the left side of the neck. The seams in the waist and sleeves of these thin lawns should not be left "raw;" that is, with rough edges. They are neatest when made with the English bag seam that first sews the edges together, making the seam on the outside of the dress. The garment is then turned and sewed on the wrong side, covering the seam just made as if with a bag—hence the name. The draped polonaise is much used for white mull overdresses. The bodice is first fitted like a basque and trimmed along its lower edges with the embroidery in two rows, one turned up and the other down, or with a puff over a ribbon, and the drapery is added in lengthwise tucks on the hips and in front.

Tucked gathered ruffles are used on mull dresses for ladies wearing mourning, and the styles of making are similar to those just described. For very simple dresses, such as young girls should wear at school Commencements, parties, etc., sprigged or dotted muslin is used. The skirt is covered by three or four gathered flounces edged with lace, and the basque is tucked or pleated, and confined by a belt of ribbon that forms a sash bow behind.

For morning dresses white linen lawn without figures is used, and is made beautiful by ruffles of Irish point or guipure embroidery. These dresses have a fitted basque with a deep apron overskirt, and there are three embroidered flounces on the lower skirt; a similar ruffle edges the overskirt and basque, and there is a vest of the embroidery.

At afternoon weddings in May or June white is almost the only wear for young ladies, but these toilettes are of satin Surah made elaborate with embroidery, or else white China crape with lace, or perhaps silk muslin or nun's veiling, with finely wrought figures all over the fabric, and many yards of Oriental lace for garniture. The sash, the gloves, and bonnet, are also white, and the only touch of color is given by the large cluster of flowers on the corsage, or of feathers in the bonnet. The basque with bouffantly trimmed skirt is preferred to polonaises for such dresses. The throat is exposed, and there is quite a display of trimming on the front of the corsage and about the neck. A jewelled brooch fastens the dress on the bust, and another may be stuck in the trimming on the side of the neck. The bonnet may be a tiny capote of shirred thin white crape or its crown may be of flowers, with a shirred crape or lace brim, and there are short dark velvet strings to tie under the chin. If a large hat is worn, it is of the finest white split straw, or of Manila, with nodding white plumes on the outside, and usually some dark velvet inside the brim. If the head is bare the coiffure is of the simplest low style, with a small Greek knot or a twist that is broad and low, while the front hair is cut short and is in small curved locks all above the forehead if the face is oval; but if the forehead is low and broad, the locks are only on the temples, while the hair between is drawn back and forms a soft Pompadour roll. There is no ornament but a jewelled comb worn—not even a flower is used by young ladies. Older ladies wear two ostrich tips, or else a pompon and algrette of marabout and heron feathers on the left side of the head. All conspicuous jewelry, especially ear-rings and necklaces, is avoided by young ladies; bracelets of the slenderest shape and valuable rings are the more favored pieces.

The twilled Surahs with or without satin finish are in great favor for street suits, and these take the place of the summer taffeta silks so long used, and rival the popular foulards. Dark Surahs are used for the street, such as navy blue, gray-blue, very dark garnet, and cypress green. These are trimmed with embroidery on the material, or with the écru mull embroidery, or else with black lace frills, either of French imitation thread lace or the silk Spanish lace. Such dresses must be made up on a foundation skirt of silk, alpaca, silesia, or other fabric less flimsy than Surah, in order to make the skirt preserve its shape; and this is not to be objected to as a sham skirt, as it often costs as much or more than the thin fabric of the outside which it is meant to support; the best French dresses have this foundation skirt, and the best modistes here use it, taking care, however, to so arrange the drapery that the foundation can not possibly be disclosed when worn.

The short round polka basque is much used for summer Surah dresses. This reaches two inches below the waist line, is nearly straight around, is wholeboned to the lowest end of each seam (as all basques should be), and is finished on its edge with one or two full bias puffs, or else two thick box-pleatings of satin, and perhaps on this may fall a frill of Spanish lace that is very scant on the sides, and full like a fan in the middle of the front and back.

A stylish ruche, that is not too full and fussy for trimming the foot of a silk skirt has first, at the lower edge a gathered frill, either straight or bias, two inches and a half wide when finished. Then above this, with its lower edge falling upon it, is the ruche six inches deep when finished, either straight or bias, and gathered by three parallel rows in the middle. It is well to line this ruche with crinoline or stiff net, and to tack the top edges to the skirt to keep it from falling.

A Noted Inventor in Jail.

[Stockton (Cal.) Mail.]

This morning in the Police Court the name of Dr. Babcock was called, and in response a terrible wreck tottered to the bar.

"What is your name?" asked the court.

"Babcock—Dr. Babcock," was the answer. When asked to plead to a charge of drunkenness, he said he wished to explain the circumstances. He had, indeed, taken two drinks—two small drinks—but he had been paralyzed and could not walk. He was not drunk. He had been in the hospital, but was a doctor, and thought he could make a living, and did not wish to be a charge on the public. "I invented," he said, "the fire and water proof paint and the chemical fire-extinguisher that bear my name." It was, indeed, the wreck of Dr. Babcock, the inventor of the Babcock fire-extinguisher.

"Have you a family?" asked the court.

"Yes, sir, but not here," was the reply.

"Where are they?"

"Up North—I don't know where. I fixed them up—my children—and sent them off, and I don't know just where they are. I have been in the hospital just twenty days, and I came out too soon, and I cannot live in jail—I thought I should die there last night."

The court remarked that the case seemed to be one calling for sympathy rather than severity, entered a plea of not guilty and allowed the old man to go on his own recognizance, it being understood that he would be sent back to the hospital,

Tried and Untrue.

Why Rupert Hetherington's Course of Love Ran Roughly.

[Chicago Tribune.]

"I have been waiting for you, Rupert."

Desdemona McCaffery was a witching strawberry blonde, with dreamy brown eyes and a large, voluptuous foot that attracted attention wherever she went. Careless and trifling in most things, and little recking whether she had pie or radishes for breakfast, her love for Rupert Hetherington was the one absorbing passion of her life. When he was by her side life was like a beautiful day in June, with the flowers blooming, the bright sunshine gladdening every nook, and the balmy breath of early summer making sweet perfume of the zephyrs that came softly from the azure-blue skies, and kissed the warm bosom of the verdure-clad earth.

"I am never unhappy when you are with me, darling," she said, nestling her head on Rupert's shoulder; "but when you are away everything is dreary, and dismal, and forlorn. Did it never occur to you of what antagonistic emotions the life of woman is made up?"

"It never did," replied Rupert. "I was too busy last week trying to figure out whether Glenmore would win a race."

For an instant there was silence. The lowing of the cattle in the distant meadow and the twittering of the swallows as they circled round the eaves of the house preparatory to turning in for the night were the only sounds to be heard. Presently Desdemona spoke again:

"But it is so, Rupert," she said. "Flame and ice, poison and perfume, smiles and tears, roses and upas, passion and abnegation—these are what the gods cast in the caldron from which came woman."

"But your sex is fickle, is it not?" said Rupert. "You know the old saying: 'Woman, thy name is Flaherty.'"

Desdemona looked at him steadily a moment.

"I presume you refer," she said in cold, better-come-in-before-your-ears-are-frozen tones, "to the line which reads: 'Frailty, thy name is woman.'"

"I guess likely," was the reply, "but I really cannot see why women should buck-jump around so much."

"It is because you do not understand their nature. A woman loves some man with a mad, unreasoning love. She is only a girl—a frail, passionate, moody girl, whose heart is a lute for every wind to play upon; who is swayed by love and honor like any reed; who is torn to pieces with the fury of her own strivings; who follows love forever and forever through the world, only to see it flicker and beckon, and allure, and fade away like the will-o'-the-wisp; who sees hope grow paler with every lovely day that dies on the horizon's purple rim; who in the sleepless midnights looks renunciation in the face with dry eyes; who walks hand in hand with a sorrow that might so easily wear the stars of joy"—and with a convulsive sob breaking from her lips the girl turned to enter the house.

Rupert stopped her. "You are off your feed, my darling," he said, in the low, musical tones he knew so well how to use when a woman's love was to be won or the unexpected advent of three aces in a jack-pot announced. "You will be better in the fall, sweetheart—the golden tinted fall, when the leaves are turning brown and the Jockey Club gets out those beautiful mezzo-tinted posters announcing its trotting races at the Ivy City Track."

"Do you really think so, Rupert?" the girl asks, putting her arms around his neck and looking at him with a wistful, how-do-you-think-you'd-feel-if-papa-was-to-heave-in-sight look.

"Why, of course I do, my angel," he replies, bending over to kiss her once for the cigars.

"And would you do anything in your power to make me happy?"—and again the yearning, anxious, somebody-hold-the-dog expression comes into the dusky eyes, from which the tears are welling.

"My love," he says, speaking slowly and with an earnestness that shows how grave the subject is to him, "you know that for your dear sake I would brave any danger, make any sacrifice that man can make. You know that your happiness is mine, that to win a smile from your sweet face hell could furnish no torture I would not endure; you know that in a pinch I would even—"

"Enough!" said Desdemona, a glad smile fluttering on her Ohio-avenue lips. "I will test your love."

"Do so," was Rupert's reply. "Let me prove my love, as the Crusaders of old did, by some noble, manly action. I am ready for the test, no matter how terrible it may be;" and his pure young face lighted up with a rapturous, Judge Holman smile.

Desdemona kissed him tenderly. "I knew you would not fail me, my own true love," she murmured. "You may bring them to the house this evening."

"Bring what?" asked Rupert. "I do not understand you."

"You will catch on before the summer is over," came the reply in clear, incisive tones. "I mean two tickets to the matinee from Sam Kinsley," and the beautiful girl stepped into the house.

With a dull pain at his heart Rupert wended his way to Willard's bar. "I am o'er young to marry," he said softly to himself, "and too luxuriantly fly to begin buying matinee tickets in June."

Six Days with Brigands.

Signor Notarbartolo's Capture, Release and Strange Experiences.

Naples Letter to the London Daily News.

The reappearance of brigandage in the distant neighborhood of Palermo so soon after the recent rejoicings has painfully impressed the inhabitants. The particulars of the treatment of ex-Syadic, Signor Notarbartolo, by the brigands have become known since his return. As soon as his companions had been disarmed by the pretented patrol the ex-Syndic perceived his mistake. His captors were dressed in new Bersaglieri uniforms, spoke the jargon of the soldiers, and had a thoroughly military appearance, rendering it likely that they all once served in the army. When Signor Notarbartolo saw the state of affairs he at once told his captors in a decided manner that all threats or bad language toward him would be of no avail, and such was the effect of his superiority of character that during the whole term of his detention the brigands treated him with deference and respect. His companions had been sent away with a letter to his family, apprising them of what had occurred, and that a ransom of 75,000f. was demanded. The brigands first took Signor Notarbartolo to the woods, and then to a grotto, or rather deep ravine, in the mountains, where he was detained for six days. The cavern was constantly guarded by two of the brigands, who had changed their uniform for the torn dress of peasants. The light penetrated this ravine for only a few hours of the day, and during that time the prisoner could read a number of the Revue des Deux Mondes, which he happened to have with him.

This was the only amusement. He was not allowed to smoke during the day, lest in so doing he should betray the place of his concealment. The brigands called the ravine their best palace, saying they had others in places more difficult of access, but they had chosen this as it was more comfortable for "his Excellence." During the first evening they conversed frankly about their affairs, recounting their exploits, and then begged their prisoner to excuse them if it annoyed him, but they did not know how to talk about anything but their own affairs. At the end of six days, during which, in accordance with the petitions of the family and a high functionary, the brigands had, by order of the Minister Depretis, been left unmolested, the sum of 50,000f. was conveyed to them, with which they expressed themselves content, telling their prisoner that he would be immediately released. The latter then asked for his watch, saying that it was a keepsake very dear to him. With characteristic courtesy it was immediately restored to it proper owner; not, however, before one of the brigands had eyed the chain with great envye exclaiming that it was very tasteful and beautiful. The ex-Syndic immediately declared with vivacity that all efforts to deprive him of it would be useless; on which the brigand who had taken a fancy to it declared that his wish to have it was quite disinterested, and that he would gladly pay for it. At this time the band had assumed, very good cloth clothes, had rings on their fingers, and gold chains to their watches. Signor Notarbartolo was received in Palermo with great demonstrations of joy, the street in which he lives being illuminated by the inhabitants. Measures for arresting the malefactors were then immediately taken, the district around Termini, where they are supposed to be still hiding, being surrounded by military. No news of their capture has yet arrived.

How the Irish Assassins Escaped.

[London Truth.]

I am not greatly surprised at the Dublin murderers not having been discovered. The original fault was unquestionably in the police allowing Lord Frederick and Mr. Burke to walk through the park without any precautions being taken for their safety. This mistake being made, and the idea of driving up to them in a fast car having occurred to the murderers, the rest was easy.

Let us suppose that the murder was planned by six men. Their first object would be to find a car and a car driver. This driver they would have to take into their secret. Two men would be set to watch the victims, and the four would mount the car. The murder being effected, the car would be driven back by a circuitous route into the town. The men would get out of it, go severally to their lodgings, and burn any portions of their clothes which might be stained with blood. Then they would either remain in Dublin and do precisely what they would have done had they not committed the crime, or they would slip out of the country one by one, on some of the numerous vessels bound for America. It is evident, therefore, that with ordinary prudence they might render it impossible for the police to obtain any clew either to their identity or to their whereabouts.

Murderers are almost always found out, owing to some fault in their planning, or to some accidental circumstance in their preparation. Either a weapon is dropped, or a chance word is heard, or blood is seen by some one on the clothes of one of the perpetrators, or the previous relation of the murderer with his victim becomes a clew. To follow up a thread is easy, but where, as in this case, the murderers have been evidently most cautious, there is no thread to follow up.

SIX P INTS.

ALL WORTH REMEMBERING.

CUT THEM OUT.

People take nauseating doses for every pain and ache, which puts their stomachs out of order, and then a physician is called to attend to them. This is all needless, for if the Hop Plaster is used, it is absorbed into the system in just the way to cure without bringing on other troubles.

A medicine to be popular must be both agreeable and efficacious, the Hop Plaster is a rare union of vegetable agents combined with safety, reliability and effectiveness. The indiscriminate use of medicines taken internally is far more productive of injury than benefit.

The most powerfully medicated and effective plaster ever invented is the Hop Plaster; it embodies all the medicinal and sedative properties of the Hop in combination with the most highly approved gums and balsams known to modern pharmacy.

The Hop Plaster is made porous, thus allowing free evaporation of moisture, stimulating the innumerable pores of the body to a healthy action and giving tone and vigor to the whole system. Its a discovery of a Yankee chemist.

The medicinal virtues of the Hop have been utilized for centuries; they are all concentrated in the Hop Plaster, and do more real good in relieving pain than any root, drug or herb liquid medicine in the whole domain of nature.

Hop Plasters are sold by all druggists in the United States and Canada, 25 cents each or 5 for $1. and are guaranteed to be the best in the markets. Avoid cheap worthless goods.

Struck by Lightning.

Yesterday afternoon about 2.30 p. m. lightning struck the ball which surmounts the long iron rod at the head of the main-royal mast of the bark Archer, lying at Startivant's wharf. The ball was thrown with the velocity of a small cannon-ball down across the wharf, and over the deck of the steamer Lady Milton lying at the next wharf, passing through a knot of seamen at work on that vessel, but luckily without injuring them. The ball then passed under the next wharf, where it lodged. The mate of the Lady Milton was standing near the seamen with a hammer in his hand, and the lightning and concussion knocked him over. He was somewhat burned about the forehead and stunned, but soon recovered and received no serious injury. The captain of the Archer was below in his cabin and thought a cannon had been fired in the harbor close by. No injury of consequence was done to the bark.

Mr. Lindsey is a man of ability, honesty, straightforwardness, experience in public affairs, and personal popularity. He is a sound and successful lawyer, and a good speaker when occasion demands, though more noted as a worker than a talker in the House. He has represented the third Congressional district in the XLV and XLVI Congresses, and thus far in the XLVII. His name will add strength to the state ticket in the canvass, and his election will give the state a representative upon whose integrity, ability and fidelity the people can safely depend.—Kennebec Journal.

The third rehearsal of the Festival Chorus for Maranocook will be this (Friday) evening at Mercantile Hall. This is the last opportunity to secure admission to the chorus. All who wish to become members must be present to-night as the names will be recorded for free tickets.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The Lease of the Eastern.

In regard to the rumors of negotiations between the Eastern and Boston & Maine there is no doubt that the management of each of the roads has been requested to state its terms for a lease. To this the Boston & Maine replied that they did not desire to lease their road upon any terms. The Boston & Maine can doubtless lease the Eastern if a suitable arrangement can be made with the stockholders. All the bondholders can ask is that their 6 per cent. interest be guaranteed to them from the first of September next. It is more than doubtful whether the Boston & Maine can safely meet the stockholders upon any terms they are likely to demand in connection with the lease.

Portland & Ogdensburg.

The Portsmouth Journal says: "The B. C. & M. Railroad controls the charter of the Meredith & Conway railroad, a corporation existing on paper, but if the litigation now pending in the United States Court in this State, between certain bondholders of the Portland & Ogdensburg railroad and the managers of the P. & O. should result in the change of ownership of that part of the line of the P. & O. railroad which is in this state, there would be a lively movement to possess this piece of road, which is the key to the White Mountain notch. It is stated that several railroad managers have an eye to this property as a part of the direct route from the West to the seaboard, and the energetic manner in which the Boston & Maine is pushing the completion of its double track east of Newton Junction, is one evidence of this fact."

The White Mountain Travel.

The same paper further says: "The Boston & Maine road will soon have a double track between Newton Junction and Scarborough, and thus be able to shorten the time of its Portland trains. The B & M. and the B., C & M. railroads will not quietly see the Eastern enjoy its magnificent White Mountain traffic, without an attempt at some time to repossess themselves of a portion of it. These roads have directors resident in this state, who have a sharp eye at all possibilities, while the management of the Eastern is in the hands of non-residents, with not a director resident on the line east of Boston. While the Eastern is furnishing the public with superb cars and rolling stock of unsurpassed excellence, its old rival the Boston & Maine is making ready to put down its double track in preparation to make a new attempt upon the passenger traffic from Maine, by affording a more rapid transit on a double track. The enormous business of the Eastern between points connected by a single track is of course done by telegraphic despatching, but convenience as well as safety should induce the managers to increase every year the length of the double track, and especially to extend it between Ipswich and Greenland."

Notes.

The mountain and seashore cars will be put on the Eastern in a few days.

Mr. John Mains has been appointed Assistant General Freight Agent of the Grand Trunk—as the PRESS stated was probable—and will proceed to Detroit to assume the duties Monday. Mr. Fred Smith, the efficient cashier of the freight department, has been promoted to the position of Portland agent in place of Mr. Mains.

Cummings, J. W. Varney, G. W. Furbish, M. P. McGillicuddy, H. C. Bradford, J. G. Coburn, O. S. Davis, W. D. Pennell, C. W. Dennett, I. C. Tapley, J. W. Whitehouse, Nelson Ham, C. B. Bartlett, A. B. New Methodist Society.

The people worshiping in the Vaughan street ward room have elected the following Sunday School officers:

Superintendent—J. Will Harper.
Assistant Superintendent—G. W. Proctor.
Secretary and Treasurer—Charles A. S. Holland.
Librarians—Alton H. Speer, Fred McDonald.
Sunday School Committee—Charles S. Bickford. Dr. Chas. L. Holt, James Scott, Mrs. M. M. Riggs, Mrs. C. L. Holt.

Arrangements are being made for a proper observance of Children's Day, probably the last Sunday in June. The treasurer has already over $20 as a nucleus to a new Sunday School library. The ladies have organized a "Willing Helpers" society, and chosen officers as follows:

President—Mrs. E. M. Waterhouse.
Vice President—Mrs. James Scott.
Secretary and Treasurer—Mrs. C. A. S. Holland.
Managers—Mrs. J. Will Harper, Mrs. Mark Wiggin, Mrs. E. J. Baker, Mrs. William B. Melcher, Mrs. M. McDonald, Miss Nellie Sanborn, Miss Hattie Winship.

The Sunday services at the Ward Room have been very fully attended. The worshipers are full of zeal, and entire harmony prevails in their ranks.

The Society of Art.

The hanging committee of the Society of Art are busily at work hanging the pictures to be displayed at their coming exhibition. The proceeds of the exhibition will be devoted to the purchase of casts for the use of the society. The number and character of the artists, whose pictures have been forwarded, gives certainty that this will prove the most important event of the kind that has ever occurred in the State. It will prove a representative exhibition of the abilities of the men who have made, and are making, for America the reputation which will entitle her to rank among the leading nations of the world in the fine arts. That the exhibition will be generously patronized by the public there can be no doubt.

A Soldiers' Monument.

The ladies of Bosworth Relief Corps think a soldiers' monument can be obtained for $3,000. Messrs. Leighton & Liberty of Deering are now making estimates for them for a polished monument of granite 15 feet square at the base and about 40 feet in height. It is proposed to make the shaft of the red Scotch granite and the pedestal of the blue or white granite. The lot at Evergreen is not large and it is thought that a more extensive affair would look out of proportion. The ladies of the corps will hold a meeting this afternoon, when plans and estimates will be laid before them. We wish Bosworth Relief Corps every success.

Corpus Christi.

The festival of Corpus Christi was duly observed by the Catholic churches in this city yesterday. At the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception high mass was celebrated. Bishop Healy was absent but Rev. T. P. Lindehan was celebrant; Rev. T. F. Delaney, deacon; Rev. John McGill, sub-deacon, and Rev. John O'Dowd, master of ceremonies. The Procession of the Blessed Sacrament was postponed until next Sunday.

Sentenced to the Reform School.

A few days days ago Lester Harlow, the shoemaker's son on Fore street, was before the Municipal Court for petty larceny. Judge Knight sentenced him to the Reform School during his minority, but suspended the execution of sentence during good behavior. Yesterday the lad was brought up again for stealing a dollar from his father. The sentence will now be executed.

What the Worcester Spy Says of the Visit.

Yesterday's Worcester Spy is at hand, and gives an interesting account of the visit to Portland. Among other things the Spy says:

There was a short season of hand-shaking good-bye to all friends, and then the boys realized that the Portland trip had passed almost into the last chapter. Upon the train home a good time was had, an impromptu concert being given by amateur bands, and various jokes being perpetrated. . . . . When the company arrived at the Union station, in this city, they marched directly to the armory, and, after Capt. Lincoln had thanked the honoraries and veterans who accompanied them, the company was dismissed. On the trains, and in fact ever since Tuesday noon, it has been the unanimous expression of all who were in the party that it was the pleasantest trip and the most generally enjoyed of any taken by the Infantry. From the arrival of the boys in Portland until the last minutes before the departure, not a thing that would add to their pleasure was left undone by the active or honorary members of the Portland Light Infantry. . . . . .

The Falmouth Hotel, which has been the headquarters of the Infantry while in Portland, has become one of the finest and most thoroughly equipped hotels in New England since it came into the hands of Col. Edward A. Gilson, formerly of the St. Nicholas, in New York. The hotel, which is six stories high and has comfortable accommodations and rooms for 400, was taken May 1st by Col. Gilson, as proprietor, who at once began a thorough renovation in all parts, and proposes to expend $70,000 before he is done. The rooms are arranged in elegant suites or singly, are high studded and well ventilated. The dining room is one of the finest in the country, being 160 feet long, 100 wide, and 45 feet high, the decorations being beautiful. The office and front are lighted by electric lights, and the main entrance and hall lead into a very large vestibule. Next month, a new tally-ho coach, with six horses, will be put on by Mr. Gilson to make daily trips from the Falmouth to some of the many shore resorts near the city. The cuisine is as good as the best of hotels, and is well served. Under the management of Col. Gilson and his assistant, Thomas Holland, the fine hotel of Portland that was allowed to run down, will again be restored. Col. Gilson is a member of the Old Guard of New York, and has many friends in this city. Before the Infantry left the house he gave them a reception. He was thanked for his courtesy during the visit, and the rousing Infantry racket cheer was given him.

The Geneva Award Bill.

To the Editor of the Press:

By your issue this morning the gratifying news comes to us that the President has approved this bill, so unanimously passed by both Houses of Congress, to his credit be it said, that, while so hardly pressed by New York influence in the interest of insurance companies to veto the bill, he has signed it, and it has become a law, and now tardy justice will be awarded those who lost large sums by the destruction of their ships and cargoes by exculpated cruisers, and which losses were not allowed in the distribution of strictly Alabama claims made some years since. Quite large sums will now come to many of our ship-owners in Maine or to their heirs, and will no doubt be most thankfully received. Much credit is due our honored Representative Reed for his earnest efforts and noble speech in the House in its behalf, while Frye in the Senate, and others in both Houses who voted for the bill, have earned and will receive the hearty thanks of all Maine claimants.

SHIPOWNER.

Portland, June 6th, 1882.

Not the Line of Duty.

The Senate committee on pensions has made an adverse report on the petition of Robert L. Willey, a corporal of Co. H, Maine Heavy Artillery, who enlisted in August, 1862, and served until April, 1865, when he went to his home at Cherryfield. News was received of the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, and Willey, with a comrade, also at home on furlough, were requested to take charge of a small cannon and fire a salute. He did so, and as he was loading for the third time, the gun being old and rusty, the charge took fire prematurely, shattering his right arm so badly that the surgeon found it necessary to amputate it at the shoulder joint. The committee indorsed the decision of the pension office, that Willey received his wound while on a furlough, and not in the line of duty. His application was, therefore, rejected.

The Colt Stakes.

The colt stakes, offered by the Maine Horse Breeders' Monthly, have been filled with a most brilliant list of colts, and the races will be run at the fair of the Cumberland County Society, at Presumpscot Park, in September, and prove a great feature. There are three stakes: the annual nursery, for foals of 1880, mile heats, two in three to harness, which has 23 nominations; breeders' stakes, for foals of 1878, mile heats, three in five to harness, with twelve entries; and Maine trotting stakes, for foals of 1878 and 1879, mile heats, three in five to harness, with twelve entries. This affair is noticeable in horse circles as being the first attempt to introduce colt trotting into Maine.

M. C. M. A.

The government of the M. C. M. A. held a meeting last evening and elected a committee to decide on the feasibility of holding a fair the coming autumn which shall be a complete exhibition of the skilled labor of the State of Maine in the mechanic arts. We hope that if the committee cannot see its way clear for such an exhibition at that time they will be able to hold one next year.

Nine applicants were admitted to membership, and two applications for membership received.

A committee was appointed to see if more accommodations could be obtained for the use of the association in the Mechanics' Hall building.

THE REFORMED MEN.

Semi-Annual Convention of Maine Clubs.

NORWAY, June 7.

Convention called to order by E. H. Horr of Lewiston.

Rev. Mr. Simonds of Norway was elected president pro tem. and E. H. Brown secretary.

The following vice presidents were elected: Lefavor of Portland, Withington of Buckfield, Ayer of Norway, Gates of Dixfield, Mosher of Waterford, Kenney of Bangor, Ham of Lewiston, Laverty of Auburn, Houghton of Bryant's Pond, Bisbee of Sumner, Shaw of South Waterford, Bundin of Chase's Mills, Grant of Norway, Bessee of Bryant's Pond.

A committee of three was appointed on permanent organization and while attending to their duties W. T. Eustis addressed the convention in a stirring speech, upholding the noble reform work, as it had saved him and hoped it would be continued in its simplicity and not change its mode of working one iota.

Addresses were also made by Messrs. Mosher, Bessey, Hooper and others.

The committee on permanent organization made the following report:

President—Oliver Loverty of Auburn.
Secretary—E. H. Brown of Norway.
Committee on Order of Exercises—Ayer of Waterford, Lefavor of Portland, Horr of Lewiston.
Committee on Speeches—Withington of Buckfield, Horr of Auburn, Lovejoy of Norway.
Committee on Resolutions—Whitman of Norway, Kennedy of Portland, Bessey of Norway.
Committee on Location—Kenney of Bangor, Horr of Auburn, Ayer of Waterford.
Committee on State Committee—Kennedy of Portland, Withington of Buckfield, Ham of Lewiston.

The report of the committee was adopted, and report of clubs was then in order.

G. H. Lefavor reported the Portland club in a good healthy condition with 52 solid members, money in the treasury and free from debt. A Ladies' Aid Society is connected with the club who have worked faithfully and succeeded in relieving the club from its heavy burden of debt and inspired the members to renewed action in the noble work of saving fallen humanity.

J. S. Grant reported the Norway club in a good and sound condition, and doing a noble work in the village.

Chas. Withington reported the Buckfield club alive and crowded houses every Sunday evening. He had not drank a drop of cider for seven years, and he was not going to commence now. The Ladies' Aid Society was working splendidly.

Mr. Kenney reported the Bangor club in good standing and had added to the constitution since November last 80 members, and now number 104 paying members and some 300 that do not pay but who are keeping their pledge. They have the best ladies' crusade in the land. Mr. Kenney paid a high tribute to the late Paul B. Beavy of Bangor.

Mr. Mosher of Waterford reported that no club now existed in that place but the large portion of those who had signed the pledge were still keeping it true and no open rum shops, and cider was the greatest curse they had to contend with.

Mr. Gates of Dixfield reported the club flourishing and overything was prospering.

Mr. Ham of Lewiston said his club was in a good flourishing condition and was being aided by the Christian people of that city. A large number had signed the pledge, of whom some had broken it but hundreds were still holding the fort.

Mr. Laverty reported the Auburn club as doing well and holds its own.

Mr. Burdin reported the club at Chase's Mills in a very flourishing condition and gave quite a lengthy review of the work of reform in his village.

Mr. Bessey of Bryant's Pond and his club was in existence and held its own since last report and free from debt. The town had greatly improved from the results of the reform work, and he knew of only two or three who had broken their pledge.

Mr. Shaw reported the Waterford club as living and holding meetings occasionally.

Short and stirring addresses were made by Eustis of Dixfield, Bridgham of Buckfield, Rev. Mr. Hooper of Norway, Whitman of Norway, Ham of Lewiston, Rev. Mr. Simonds of Norway.

A praise meeting was held from 7 to 7 1-2 in the Universalist Church, which was presided over by Lewis Lovejoy of Norway,

At 7 1-2 o'clock the public meeting was called to order by President Loverty. After singing and opening exercises an address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Whitman of Norway, which was responded to by Mr. Eustis on behalf of the delegates. Strong and stirring speeches were made by Kenney of Bangor, Lefavor of Portland, Simonds of Norway, Sprague of South Paris, Laverty of Auburn, Horr of Lewiston, and a large number of others. The speeches were interspersed with singing by a splendid choir led by Mr. J. A. Brown of the Norway club. Miss Nellie Stewart, a miss of eleven years, sang beautifully the song of "Father is signing the Pledge," and at the close quite a number signed the pledge, among whom was the father of the little miss.

The weather is lovely and we are having a good convention and the people of Norway are entertaining the visitors right royally.

OSCAR WILDE

A prominent New York Artist photographed a short time ago Mr. Oscar Wilde, the Æsthetic apostle, in many positions which are very characteristic, as being explanatory of the doctrines of this new disciple. Among many of the compositions which were emblematic, were some, with the dim and shadowy patterns of sunflowers and lilies on the walls, and used as accessories in the interiors, and when exterior compositions were used, then the artist was equally happy in their arrangement The proof of the negatives gave Mr. Wilde the greatest satisfaction, as does the Æsthetic and other poses of Hearn the popular photographer of the State of Maine, whose new and elegant studio is located in Dow's Block, 514 Congress Street in this city.

POETRY.

Governor Plaisted's Letter to Sam.

The Washington correspondent of the Lewiston Journal furnishes a corrected version of this famous letter, with parts not before printed in italics:—

I wrote you last evening, dear Sammy, since when I've been thinking (don't laugh, Sam!) and now
write again,
For I want you to know, and to bear it in mind
That you're not to mind me, though I got left behind.

We have need to throw chaff, my dear Sammy, and hence
You'll take the above in Pickwickian sense.

The dear people who dwell at the cross-roads, and those Whose abodes the rude fences of back lots enclose
Are the hope of our cause, if we treat them with scorn,
We're sinners and publicans, Sam, sure as you're born.

Ithare this to say, Sam, the rabble to suit,
They'll furnish the votes, and we'll divvy the loot.

We're now to be tempted, and tried quite as sore
As we formerly were, Sam, and possibly more;
But I'm firm to withstand all monopoly rings
And I'll never go back on our Greenbacks and things.

Of course you'll explain to your friends and conferees,
That I don't mean to harm any interest of theirs.

There must be no more squabbles, Sam, over the spoils,
Surely honor's a crown, fit for any man's toils;
And as for this trading, it makes people sick,
So stand by your colors, Sam, stand there and stick.

(Why can't we in virtue denounce every trade,
Now everything's fixed, Sam — our bargains all made!)

Wit and Wisdom.

Colonel Holman Watts is an Austin gentleman of a desponding turn of mind, who is always threatening to commit suicide when things do not suit him, but who has never succeeded in doing so. He became depressed a few days ago, because his hat flew off when he sneezed, and desiring to put an end to life he started as usual for the cistern to drown himself with suicidal intent. "Take off those boots first," said his wife, who is a matter-of-fact kind of a woman. "What for?" he asked feebly, pulling open the trap door. "Because the water will harden the boots, and next time you go down to the lodge in them when you come home you will complain of your corns hurting you," replied Mrs. Holman Watts, resuming her work on the sewing machine. Holman shut the trap door with such violence that neighbors a quarter of a mile off thought it was the blasting of rock over at the foundation of the new Capitol at the head of Austin Avenue.—Texas Siftings.

Trouble Saved.

It is a remarkable fact that THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL, is as good for internal as external use. For diseases of the lungs and throat, and for rheumatism, neuralgia, crick in the back, wounds and sores, it is the best known remedy and much trouble is saved by having it always on hand.

A titled female in barbarous countries cuts her nails but once in five years, and then the occasion is made one of great rejoicing, especially by her husband.—[Lowell Citizen.

The history of music has never given us a more ravishingly seductive instrument than the xylophone. It is nature's own melody. Talk about the curfew bell or the warble of the bobolink or the ripple of mountain streams, if you please, but the musical wash-board known as the xylophone scoops them all. Make a picket fence with pickets of different lengths, and pound on it with a stick of stove wood, and you have the xylophone. It is cheaper than the piano, and yet can yield almost as much divine racket. It is within the reach of all, and yet it is wonderfully soothing to the ear. The xylophone in appearance resembles a corduroy bridge, and in sound resembles the song of the male Guinea hen as he coos to his mate.—Laramie Boomerang.

Egyptian History.

The history on Egypt, although we have long lists of consecutive Pharaohs, and though some portions of it stand out with surprising clearness, is broken by serious gaps which have not yet been bridged over. It is true that there is a papyrus composed about 1300 B. C. of which so much is decipherable as to show that it is a carefully compiled chronicle of the country from the supposed creation of the world—according to Egyptian notions—up to that date; but it is so torn and worn as to be historically almost useless. We learn, however, from other sources, much about a succession of ancient dynasties, during the earliest of which wars were carried on with the Bedouins in the east and Libyans in the west, and much devotion was shown in the construction of monuments and tombs. These wars were presently waged with the assistance of conscript negroes brought down the Nile in large transport ships Then come blanks in which national calamities are marked by cessation in the building of temples and in the engraving of contemporary history, for the Egyptian never liked to chronicle events unfavorable to himself. Then the Theban dynasty arose, and Egypt arose with it. Former defeats were avenged, more temples and pyramids were built, agriculture was revived, and order re-established. This period was broken by the arrival of the famous Shepherd Kings, but whence they came no one can really determine. We know, however, that in the main they accepted the civilization which they found. After several hundred years they were expelled, a papyrus in the British Museum telling us how this was done. Then Egypt had a fresh Theban revival. We find her turning the tables on other countries and from having been invaded becomes an invader. Her galleys were to be seen in the Mediterranean and Red Seas, the horse was introduced with the war chariot, Asiatic slaves were employed on Government works, and Central Asia was conquered, after campaigns begun by the famous battle of Megiddo, fought by Thothmes III in Palestine. This is a singularly interesting period in Egyptian history, as it brings before us contemporaneous allusion to Damascus, Hamath, an "Og," King of Bashan, and many original names of the cities of Canaan two centuries before the time of Joshua. To quote from Mr. Birch: "The arm of Egypt reached to Nineveh. Babel brought tributes and homage. * * * In the hymns or poems to Thothmes, Phœnicia and the islands of the Mediterranean are mentioned." Then comes another eclipse in Egyptian history, with religous revolution, in which, under Amenophis IV, the worship of the Disk was introduced and the old gods were vigorously assailed. Their honor, however, was soon restored, for this effort to stamp out popular polytheism and abolish all worship except that of the sun produced a reform which lasted for only one generation. Presently fresh invasions came from the East, whereby the conquests of Thotmes were lost. These were, nevertheless, once more regained, and indeed extended into Europe, by Ramesse II, or Great, known to the Greeks as Sesostris, who is believed to be the Pharaoh who first mightily oppressed the children of Israel.
